The Editor's Corner

EACH FOOTBALL season we are confronted with the question, "Why aren't Ohio University's scores included in Sunday papers away from the campus?"

Alumni in Detroit, St. Louis, San Francisco, and other cities find to their dismay that they can't find out how their alma mater fared the day before. Sometimes the list of scores includes much smaller colleges but Ohio University's name is missing.

The answer is simply that Ohio University's scores sometimes get lost in the overwhelming wave of football information sent out by the wire services each week. The score is reported to the wire services immediately after the game. Both the Associated Press and United Press International relay it on, along with hundreds of others.

From this avalanche, each sports editor across the country selects the scores he wants. Teams in major conferences such as the Big Ten are singled out. Others are selected according to proximity or national reputation. This leaves the vast majority to chance. Very few papers have the space to use the three or four hundred scores which come in on the wire.

Ohio University has the same chance of being mentioned as any other school of equal football reputation. But sometimes it becomes a victim of space limitations.

Something can be done, however. Sports writers are fair minded people. They will try to print what their readers want. If your newspaper does not report Ohio University scores each week, you can approach the sports editor in person, or by mail. A phone call during his rush hour to meet a deadline is not a recommended approach. Tell him how many alumni of Ohio University live in the city. You can get that information by dropping a card to the Alumni Office. By pointing out the number of readers who would be interested in seeing Bobcat scores, you will give him a valid reason for including them on his Sunday page.

Another statistic which can be obtained from the Alumni Office is the approximate number of students coming from each area. This too is important to your sports editor.

Last year alumni reported that even the Cleveland papers did not always carry Bobcat football scores. This is an area represented by some 1400 Ohio University students as well as 2400 alumni. If this is brought to the attention of the Cleveland sports writers they will make special efforts to include Ohio University scores.

In Phnom Penh, capital of Cambodia, Dr. Baker met former OU student, Mrs. David D. Russell (Peggy Smith, '45), whose husband is personnel manager of A. L. Daugherty overseas.

Around the World, Alumni Serve OU

Ohio University alumni in far away cities proved to President John C. Baker that the University has a strong force of international good-will ambassadors.

ON July 19 President John C. Baker left Athens on a trip to Cambodia, Indo-China. His principal mission: To study the educational needs of that country for the U.S. State Department's International Cooperation Administration.

But a surprise side-light of the trip soon reached the proportions of an important phase of his tour. All along the way, from San Francisco to Phnom Penh, Cambodia, the president was met by enthusiastic groups of the Ohio University alumni.

When he returned in early September, Dr. Baker described his meetings with these former students as "one of the greatest pleasures and one of the most significant endorsements of Ohio University I have experienced since coming to Athens in 1945".

Meeting both with Americans serving in the Armed Forces and former foreign students who have returned to jobs in their native lands, Dr. Baker was impressed with "their profound interest in their alma mater and the sincerity with which they posed questions about faculty and other citizens of Athens."

In such cities as Tokyo and Bangkok, Ohio University alumni gathered together for the first time, expressing a desire to become official chapters of the Alumni Association. At more informal meetings in the homes of former OU students, Dr. Baker was pleasantly astounded to learn how much many wives, who have never even been in this country, know about Ohio University.

"Our former foreign students, many of whom hold very responsible positions in their countries, understand the United States, "Dr. Baker reported," and they are important figures in our struggle for better international understanding".

One alumnus in Bangkok, the capital of Thailand pointed to his knowledge of the English language as his "key to freedom" Dr. Baker said.

Some of the groups made plans to send mementos of their countries to Ohio University, to be displayed as symbols of good will from alumni abroad. These gifts ranged from photographs and letters all the way to a stone "friendship lantern" weighing several hundred pounds, purchased by the Tokyo alumni group for Ohio University.

President Baker returned to the campus "re-firmed with the knowledge that Ohio University has a potent force of good-will ambassadors in other countries who are credits to the university and their fellow alumni, and important factors in world peace."

San Francisco

At San Francisco Dr. Baker was met by his sister-in-law Mrs. Leonard Crum, and OU Alumna William H. Keplinger, '25, who is assistant treasurer of the Crown Zellerbach Corporation.

Honolulu

A red carpet reception awaited Dr. Baker when his Japan Air Lines flight arrived in Honolulu. Alumni placed the traditional leis across his shoulders while a three-piece "string band" strummed a welcome to the Islands. Proceeding to the lounge at Queen's Hospital, where Alumnus Dr. Sumner Price, '21 is administrator and medical director, the group listened to more music, then listened to an informal talk by the guest of honor. In the reception group were Dr. and Mrs. Price, Gaylord Pang '56; Dr. and Mrs. Nakatsuji, parents of 1956 graduate Ron Nakatsuji; Frank Loo, '49; Lt. Neal Wooden and Mrs. Wooden (Louise Price, '53); Gilbert McCoy, '49; Albert Tanimura, '56; John H. Robinson, '41, and Mrs. Robinson (Vula McCoy, '40). After spending the night with Dr. and Mrs. Price, Dr. Baker visited the University of Hawaii. The alumni group rejoined him for lunch and he had dinner with Dr. and Mrs. Price "under the tropical skies at Queen's Surf," before boarding the plane for Tokyo. In the top photo Dr. Baker meets Mr. Loo, president of the Honolulu Alumni Chapter. In the middle photo he chats with Dr. Price, Mrs. Price and Mrs. Nakatsuji. Below, Hawaiian Singer Joe Ikiote entertains at the airport, while Lt. Wooden, Mrs. Wooden and Mrs. Price look on approvingly.

Tokyo

The first thing President Baker noticed when his plane arrived at Tokyo was a large green and white Ohio University pennant, displayed by alumni living in the Japanese city. A party in which alumni "pulled out all the stops" followed that evening, and plans were made to purchase the tremendous friendship lantern to send to Ohio University. When Dr. Baker made a second stop at Tokyo, on the return trip from Cambodia, the lantern was ready for shipment to the U.S. Alumni who joined the party in Tokyo were Miss Mischiko Sato, Ishiro Seto, Jinza Yonezawa, Maj. Thomas Morgan, Mrs. Shinji Tamagawa (Yasufo Tsuchihashi), Bunya Tajiuta, Lt. Charles Orr, Lt. George Davenport, and Lt. Col. Robert West. Seto and Yonezawa are shown in the photograph, with friendship lantern at lower right.

Philippines

In the Philippines Dr. Baker visited the University of the Philippines. Left to right are Dr. Abelaide, special assistant to the University president; Dr. Hoshall of the ICA; Dr. Benjamin Willis of Chicago, who served with Dr. Baker in the mission to Cambodia; President V. Sinco of the University of the Philippines; Dr. Baker; and Dean Ortigas. In October, President Sinco and Dr. Abelaide returned President Baker's visit by coming to the Ohio University campus.

Vietnam

At Saigon, Vietnam, Dr. Baker was met at the airport by Capt. John M. Nolan '48 and his wife, the former Rosemary Snackenbergh, '48. Together they visited the American Community School where Mrs. Nolan teaches and stopped at the Economic Section of the American Embassy to visit Mrs. Bobby Keyes (Janet Schultz, '53), who is employed there. They also visited a temple of the Tao religion before the president boarded a plane for Cambodia.

Hong Kong

Stopping in Hong Kong, Dr. Baker was entertained by Mau Wa Li, (left) a 1925 graduate of Ohio University now operating a successful importing business. A son, Sammy Li, (on president's right) talked to Dr. Baker about following his father to the OU campus, and when school opened in September, Sammy Li was among the freshmen enrolled.

Sputniks, Science and Scholarship

If there is cause for fear in today's scientific race, it is not so much of the Russians as of our own reluctance to pay the price our national freedom demands.

By Merrill F. Aukland

Assistant Professor of Geography and Geology

ILLUSTRATION BY MARIE STEHR, '58

WE, THE PEOPLE of the United States, are being subjected to more incriminations than at any other time in our relatively short history as a world power.

The subject of this guilt complex has been motivated by the sudden appearance of the Sputniks. Currently we are reeling under a barrage of self-accusations ranging from gross negligence, management from an administrative jungle, vacillation of national budget policies to the most serious of them all—scientific incompetence.

While we are bent upon excuses, apologies, investigations and self-examination, the Russian sphere of influence continues to reap rich rewards far out of proportion to the enormity of the situation.

In the words of the journalist, we have been scooped. While we have been waging a war of automobile horsepower and talking about exotic fuels, the Russians have been making exotic fuels and talking about automotive horsepower.

Not Mortally Wounded

Our pride has suffered serious setbacks but we have not been mortally wounded. Our heritage as a great nation has stemmed from a phenomenal growth in a short span of time and we have become accustomed to success. The record of scientific success in the United States speaks for itself.

The apparent injury to our national pride is not in itself too serious. A more important cause of public reaction might well be fear—fear not so much of the Russians but of ourselves.

There are those who doubt that the mere authorization of a special missile budget of two billion dollars is the whole answer to the missile race. This fear may well be justified.

We, the citizens of the United States, are an unusual people. Our brief history is studded with accomplishments. In maintaining our position in world affairs we usually permit others to establish the rules of the game before we choose our training program.

This formula, fortunately, has been able to marshal our forces around our particular strength of mass-production and subsequently victimize the rule-setters. To date, this has been successful, but the outcome of each contest has been increasingly more cloudy.

Before the skies become completely over-shadowed let us examine the facts and do less rationalizing.

Many of our scientific leaders know why we have lagged behind in matters missile. Some of them recognize that unclear, unwieldy management with a capricious policy will never culminate into a continuing leadership in the technological race of today and tomorrow.

Sudden impetuous emphasis on our budget may not necessarily offset the value of well-planned long range programs to not only step-up our technology but to develop and train masses of scientists.

Serious Omissions

There is firm conviction that our past educational omissions have been heinous sins which have materially contributed to our plight today.

The sudden announcement by the President of the appointment of Dr. James Killiam as is a partial, although belated, acknowledgement that scientific leadership at high levels is essential to the future of this great nation.

Already many voices have been heard from varied interests that our President be induced, through Killiam's staff function, to recognize some of our basic weaknesses and do something about them.

A great deal of time and planning will be required to overcome our current deficiencies in science and scientists. We must be willing to accept the necessity, both figuratively and financially, of persuading our best scientific brains to efficiently organize our national effort in this behalf.

The generation of greater numbers of scientists is our protection for the long range future. The efficient utilization of the scientific method in matters economic, social, philosophical, and political is mandatory to our survival.

Our scientists have produced—they have not been asleep. There is no doubt our scientists have created vast stores of information, much of which is restricted, classified and unpublished.

Proof of this is the record. Witness the embryonic atomic fleet and we are told we have many outposts that are atomically armed.

A Bad Trade

There must be planned reasons for the abandonment of certain projects that are now under way or perhaps others yet to come. Let us not be foolish and encourage the trade of these unfinished projects for burned out Sputniks. This would be fallacious wisdom.

Naturally we want instruments of offense and defense that are bigger and better than our adversaries. We want them as soon as possible and we want everything else as well, including lower taxes. Perhaps it all can be done but I doubt it. We cannot have our cake and eat it too!

One thing is certain, however, that we must pay whatever the cost which our scientific freedom demands. In order for us to continue to enjoy our precious freedom we must make a wise investment for our future at once.

Russia is currently turning out over 55,000 engineers each year, while this figure may not be equalled in the United States until 1965. Such statistics prove very little but they might serve to warn us that we should wisely legislate against complacency which has been too long an American custom.

We have a challenge ahead of us. It is here now. The challenge of the moment is not so much from Russia but is from our own educational system. The task is not an easy one. We must change our curricula at all levels to include liberal doses of mathematics and certain of the sciences.

We must guard, however, against too rigid scientific training. To train more people in the ways of science does not eliminate consideration of the humanities for it is widely known that there is considerable difference between a technologist and a scientist.

A man is a better scientist to have been firmly grounded in the arts. The future training of our scientists must be on a broad basis. This would also serve to provide a better scientifically informed lay public.

These scientists should be paid in proportion to the sacrifices that they make; first, in acquiring their training, and second, in subjecting themselves throughout their careers to the rigid mental discipline which sound scientific training demands.

More Interest Needed

We must encourage more interest of the scientist and the public towards the student or prospective student himself rather than on the objective. Certain industries are already subsidizing scientifically inclined students at the college and university level. We must encourage more of this sort of thing, not only at the higher education level, but also in the junior and senior high schools. More liberal scholarship programs must be formed, and standards must be kept at a high level.

These changes in our behavior will cost time and money but to accomplish them will be sharing up one of our glaring weaknesses. When these things are accomplished Russia will no longer be a challenge to our future for she possesses weaknesses where we have untold strength.

If we wish to be first, and there is nothing that succeeds like success, let us not resort to further incrimination as the solution to achievement. Let us face the facts; plan for the objective; accomplish what we plan, and pay the costs, whatever the price. We must.

HOMECOMING 1958

WINNING MEN'S FLOAT, entered by Phi Kappa Sigma, showed engine overrunning hapless Redskin, carried sign "Railroad Miami."

WOMEN'S FLOAT WINNER by Center Dorm was decorated with large family of rabbits. Its theme: "Let's Multiply Our Victories."

HOUSE DECORATION by Delta Tau Delta took first prize with a large typewriter. Keys and carriage worked, spelling out "Victory."

ALUMNI CONVERGED on the campus October 18 to join students in the biggest spectacle of the year—Homecoming. From the opening rally on Friday night to the closing dance on Saturday, events moved smoothly and enjoyably, with only one exception. That was the football score which read "Miami 14, Ohio 10."

Even then most alumni expressed pleasure in seeing Coach Bill Hess and his team make a close game of what was expected to be a runaway.

With the usual display of originality, students paraded 32 elaborate floats along Athens streets, with Center Dorm and Phi Kappa Sigma capturing first place trophies. Runners up were Phi Mu sorority and Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity. In the house decoration contest, Delta Tau Delta finished first with Sigma Chi second and Lambda Chi Alpha third.

After threatening rain, mother nature executed an about face to cooperate with Chairman Larry Wise and his Homecoming committee in providing a sunny welcome for returning grads.

HOMECOMING PARADE moves down Union Street from College Street. Thirty-two floats and three marching bands were included in the 1958 parade. Parade chairman was Larry Spiegel.

Kendall Wins Award

ONE of the four winners of the annual Ohioana Book Awards is Dr. Paul Murray Kendall, professor of English and a member of the OU faculty since 1937.

For his book "Warwick the Kingmaker," Dr. Kendall received the medal for biographical non-fiction. His earlier biography, "Richard III," a runner-up to the National Book Award, was on the best seller list for several weeks in 1956.

Physics Professor Honored

DR. Charles A. Randall, chairman of the OU Physics Department, has been made a member of the New York Academy of Science. Membership is obtained by special invitation upon recommendation of members of the academy to outstanding scientists in the United States.

The objects of the Academy are to advance scientific research and discovery; to provide a forum for the presentation and discussion of scientific problems; to publish and distribute the results of research and to interpret them for the promotion of the common welfare.

Chem Profs Get Grants

Three members of the Chemistry department have received grants for research projects.

Dr. Wendell V. F. Brooks will work on mathematical research in the structure of molecules. His grant was made by the Petroleum Research Fund. Dr. William B. Smith received two grants to carry out research in the chemistry of organic compounds.

Dr. Robert Kline was granted a leave of absence to do research work at Los Alamos for the next year.

Dr. John T. Everett, assistant professor of government, spent four weeks touring the Federal Republic of Germany and West Berlin during the summer.

Dr. Everett received the invitation for the tour from the West German Government at Bonn.

Mutchler to Paint Mural

DWIGHT Mutchler, lecturer in drawing, has been commissioned to paint a $15,000 mural for display in Ohio's Statehouse. The painting, which will measure nine by 12 feet, will depict pioneering aviation achievements of the Wright Brothers.

Selection of Mr. Mutchler was made by the Ohio State Historical Society Board of Trustees from a list of 52 applications. Preliminary screening had narrowed the field to five artists, each of whom was given $1000 to prepare a preliminary drawing. Mr. Mutchler's drawing, featuring a portrait of the famed Dayton brothers in front of a montage showing their accomplishments, was selected from the five finalists.

Working in his spare time, the OU artist plans to have the mural completed in one year, in time for dedication early in 1960.

A professional artist in Chicago for 25 years before joining the OU faculty in 1950, Mr. Mutchler has gained widespread recognition for his work in portraiture and drawing. He was designer of the Sesquicentennial Seal of the University, and in 1956 he created a mural-map of the world, depicting ways of life in all continents, which hangs in the University Center Lobby.

His illustrations have appeared in the top magazines of the country and he has frequently served as a judge in top ranking art exhibits.

New Controller

WILLIAM Roberson, a 1939 OU graduate, has been appointed controller in the office of the treasurer here. He has been associated with the treasurer's office since 1941, most recently as cashier.

Mr. Roberson and his wife have a son and daughter both attending Ohio University this year.

Professor Hill Dies

VICTOR D. Hill, professor emeritus of Ohio University, died in Sheltering Arms Hospital June 20. Professor Hill came to OU in 1920 as a professor of Greek. When he retired in 1954, he was head of the department of classical languages. He is survived by his wife, Carrie V. Hill; a daughter, Mrs. Alma Montgomery of Cincinnati and a sister, Mrs. John Hoss of Kansas City, Missouri.

Dean Takes New Position

MAUREL Hunkins recently resigned his position as dean of men, a position which he has held for the past 12 years, to assume a newly created position as director of public occasions and special services next fall.

Dean Hunkins will remain in his present position and there will be no changes in the personnel of the deans' office for the balance of the school year.

Among the duties of his new office, Mr. Hunkins will be in charge of convocations, commencement exercises, all conferences by outside groups, arranging for visits of dignitaries and determining their widest possible benefit on campus.

Dean of men at Ohio U. since 1946, Mr. Hunkins is a native of San Jose, Calif., and a graduate of Oakland Technical High School, Oakland, Calif. He received the M.A. degree from the University of California in 1927 and subsequently attended New York University and Columbia as a part-time student. He is a member of Phi Beta Kappa.

Before coming to Ohio U., he was in charge of instrumental music at New York University from 1928 to 1946, becoming acting director of student personnel there in 1942. During the years of 1932 to 1940 he also was chairman of the department of music at Manhattan College, New York City.

Dean Hunkins' long time interest in foreign affairs has taken him to Europe twice and includes a period of study in Geneva, Switzerland.

Beginning with a parade of champions, in which the Athens High School and Ohio University graduate was joined by three other top golfers, the program included a ceremony at the University Center, an exhibition golf match at the Athens Country Club, and a closing banquet.

During the festivities Dow and his wife,

The idea for Dow Finsterwald Day originated soon after Dow won the PGA tournament in July. Fred Swearingen, '42, owner of an Athens sporting goods store, served as general chairman.

The timeliness of the occasion was reaffirmed a month later when the PGA named Dow 1958 Professional Golfer of the Year.

Tokyo

The Alumni Association's most far distant chapter has been organized in Tokyo, Japan, with two successful meetings already completed this fall and another scheduled for the Sanno Hotel in downtown Tokyo December 6.

Organization of the chapter followed Dr. John C. Baker's visit to the city in September. Then, on October 4, the group assembled again to elect officers and enjoy a dinner at the Katase Restaurant.

Officers elected for the first year were Jinji Yonezawa, president; Maj. Thomas Morgan, vice president and program chairman; Ichiro Seto, secretary-treasurer.

Sam Levine

Orchard of Sour Apples

REPRINTED FROM THE CLEVELAND PLAIN DEALER

A "SOUR APPLE" grew in Cleveland.

About a decade ago, Sam Levine, secretary of the Bowling Proprietors Association of Ohio and Cleveland, watched a bowler leave a 5-7-10 split.

"You join the club with a split like that," Sam said in jest.

"What club?" asked the unhappy bowler.

Levine thought quickly and replied, "the Sour Apple Club."

The seeds of the Sour Apple Club were sown and Sam cultivated the cliché weekly in the Cleveland Kegler, of which he is editor and publisher.

Every time a bowler in the city left the 5-7-10 pins standing, someone was sure to tip off Sam, who mailed the bowler a membership card and mentioned it in the Kegler.

The Sour Apple Club members tattled on others and soon Levine was asked to explain the entry rules in a national bowling magazine. Interest continued to grow.

New clubs cropped up in Akron, Cincinnati, Columbus and in other large cities from coast to coast. More membership cards depicting a sour-looking apple were printed and distributed.

In Akron some bowling centers have posted signs stating: "The management wishes to extend its deepest sympathy to bowlers who find themselves faced with the 5-7-10 leave. Be not dismayed, this happens to all-stars and novices alike. Step up to the counter and ask for your lifetime membership card in the Sour Apple Club."

The Sour Apple Club is Levine's pet project in the "on-the-lighter-side" department.

Rated among the top bowling authorities in the nation, Sam has been living and breathing the sport for 20 years and has become known as "Mr. Bowling of Cleveland."

Sincerely interested in many charitable organizations, Levine has promoted a Cleveland charity bowling tournament which has raised over a quarter of a million dollars in the last 10 years. For this accomplishment, he has been named "Mr. Charity" by the Cleveland City Council and Mayor Anthony Celebrezze has set aside one week as "Charity Bowling Week."

Levine lately has been promoting bowling through the students. Five years ago he formed the Senate high school league and the following year introduced the Cuyahoga County League. City Recreation and CYO tournaments became an annual event last year.

The Sam Levine byline is continually appearing in national bowling magazines and other publications. He has won six writing awards in the American Bowling Congress bowling writers association. His writing is generally on controversial subjects and stimulates many replies which are printed weekly in the Kegler. He will judge the bowling writers' contest in 1959 and 1960.

Levine's daily radio program, "Strikes and Spares" over WHK offers Cleveland bowlers the latest news, views and interviews. Several of the programs originate directly from the bowling establishments. He has also directed and announced many bowling television shows, locally and nationally.

His writing and announcing projects are in the "on-the-entertainment-side" department.

In the "on-the-business-side" department, Levine's positions as executive secretary of the Bowling Proprietors Association of Ohio and the B.P.A. of Greater Cleveland are full-time jobs in themselves. He is also vice-president of the National Bowling Writers Association.

Record Enrollment

A TOTAL enrollment of 7342 students represents the highest enrollment in the history of Ohio University. Albert C. Gubitz reports a total of 2347 students enrolled in the six branches.

On campus figures by colleges are: Applied Science, 873; Arts and Science, 892; Commerce, 949; Fine Arts, 431; Education, 1076; University College, 2783 and Graduate College, 347.

Enrollment in the branches is: Portsmouth, 480; Chillicothe, 485; Lancaster, 380; Zanesville, 352; Martins Ferry, 240 and Ironton, 135.

More than 100 branch students at Lockbourne Air Base will be served by the Lancaster Branch and an equal number will be served at the Piketon Atomic Energy Plant by the Chillicothe Branch.

Education and Peace

THE IMPORTANCE of education in the underdeveloped countries was pointed out by President John C. Baker at his annual Convocation for the student body and faculty September 30.

Dr. Baker said that education is the best answer to a better and more peaceful world and that it can be a force greater than armies. He said that everywhere he went on his trip to Cambodia there was a deep interest and concern about education.

Our education system in this country is still the best ever designed for peace, freedom and opportunity, according to Dr. Baker, but we must recognize and support the underdeveloped countries in their educational endeavors.

Scholastic Averages

THE ALL school scholastic average for the spring semester last year is 2.359.

The sorority average is the highest among the individual breakdowns. The Greek women have a 2.67 average. Non-sorority women have a 2.478.

The scholastic average among the fraternities is 2.339; while the non-fraternity men's average is 2.226.

University Fees Increased

A $20 per semester increase in fees and an $18 per semester hike in board rates became effective September. President Baker said the increases make Ohio University fees comparable to those of other state universities.

The increase is an absolute necessity, according to President Baker, in relation to the present level of faculty salaries. The increase makes the registration fee for one semester $135 for Ohio residents and $285 for non-state residents. Previous rates were $115 and $260 respectively.

The charges were made necessary by the increase in costs of faculty and facilities during the past five years when student enrollment has nearly doubled.

The enrollment increase has caused operational costs to rise to the extent that both larger appropriations and larger student fees are necessary.

Freshman From Hong Kong

ON SEPTEMBER 10 a young man stepped off a plane at the Columbus airport, shook hands with Ohio University's alumni secretary, and set out on the last 70 miles of a trip that had taken him half way around the world.

Sammy Li, son of a Hong Kong importer, was on his way to Athens to enroll as a freshman at Ohio University.

The arrival of the nice looking crew-cut youth at Ohio University has special significance. He is the first foreign student whose father is an Ohio University alumnus.

Sammy's father, Mau Wa Li, graduated from OU in 1925 with a B.S. degree in commerce. Returning to Hong Kong, he soon became head of the Li Bros. Company, importers of leather and jewelry, started by his grandfather in the middle of the last century.

The younger Li plans to follow in his father's footsteps by majoring in business administration.

Apartments Planned

A LOAN of $180,000 for construction of two apartment buildings for married students has been granted O. U. The estimated cost of the project is $515,000, with the university providing the remaining $35,000.

The project will provide new and better living accommodations for the university's married students. The East State Street Apartments will still be in use.

Actor Visits Campus

BRITISH actor Sir John Gielgud appeared at an evening convocation in Memorial Auditorium October 15. His sole performance was based on George Ryland's Shakespeare Anthology consisting of three parts; youth, manhood and old age.

Gielgud, a star of the theatre, screen and television, in previous tours in the United States appeared in "Hamlet," "The Importance of Being Earnest," "Crime and Punishment," "Love for Love," and a new adaptation of "Medea."

His present tour is his first solo-performance tour in the U.S.

Flight Training Started

FLIGHT instruction for Air Force and Army ROTC senior cadets is in effect this semester. By June of next year approximately 11 Air Force cadets will have received 36 hours of flight instruction in a Cessna 172 at the Ohio University Airport.

The seven Army cadets enrolled in the course will take a total of 70 hours, half flying and half in class, which is in addition to the regular ROTC classroom time.

The Air Force cadets who complete this instruction and the prescribed ground training will have the basic work for a private pilot's certificate.

OU's Foreign Students

SIXTY-THREE foreign students representing 30 countries are a part of the 7342 enrollment this semester. Four students are from Canada, three from Greece, seven from Hawaii, four from Hong Kong, four from Korea. Other countries represented are: Afghanistan, Burma, Canal Zone, Chile, China, Columbia, Dominican Republic, Egypt, England, Germany, Haiti, Iran, Iraq, Jamaica, Jordan, Malaya, Mexico, Panama, Philippines, South Africa, Sweden, Taiwan, Thailand, Vietnam and Hungary.

Tradition Revived

A TRADITION which had died out over the years was revived by members of an OU fraternity recently.

All members of the fraternity had a mock mourning period and funeral in memory of their brother, who was very much alive but not in the eyes of his fraternity brothers.

The brothers, dressed in black and carrying umbrellas, and many loyal sorority girls and friends joined in a final ceremony at the burial grounds.

All turned out well when "the mourned" was resurrected at the Saturday night party at the fraternity house.

Bobcat Roundup

By Rowland Congdon, '49

ALUMNI WHO witnessed the Ohio University Homecoming football game with Miami left Athens with this assurance—football at their alma mater is in a state of rejuvenation under the tireless workings of fellow alumnus, Bill Hess, Class of 1947.

If alums could have stayed around long enough to have seen the freshman team in action—they defeated Miami's yearlings 16-6 in their opener—they would realize that Ohio U. is possibly on the way back to former high status among Ohio and Mid-American Conference grid powers.

The varsity team that lost to Miami, 14-10, was defeated in only one phase of the game—manpower. And fans after the game were all saying, "wait until next year". This cry, of course, has been heard before many times, not only here, but elsewhere. This time, however, it is believed to be said with some basis for fulfillment.

The freshman team has just what the varsity team lacks—big linemen. If they can stay around long enough to attain varsity status, the Hess power system should be operating in full gear.

Already three victories have been recorded from the five games played to the date of this writing. And fans were hopeful that after two seasons of only two victories apiece, once again Bobcat football records would be on the winning side.

Among the Hess innovations this year to bring recognition to individual members of the team are the institution of awards to the top lineman and all-around top player of the team in each game. The lineman of the week and the Bobcat of the week are given mementoes of their honors.

Actually, the Bobcat of the Week award was begun through the joint efforts of the Green and White Club and university radio station, WOUB. The radio station interviews the "Bobcat" on the air each week and has his picture posted in several spots around town. He is also awarded a desk set with his name engraved on it together with the game for which he won it. The top lineman is awarded a plaque presented by the American Legion post here, likewise with proper inscription.

For the season so far, here are the award winners, together with the game for which the award was won: Quarterback Chuck Stobart, Middleport, (Bobcat) and Tackle Jim Woods, Athens (lineman) Youngstown game; Guard Joe Dean, Archbald, Pa., both awards for Toledo game; Bob Harrison, halfback, St. Louis, Mo. (Bobcat) and Guard John McCormick, Hamilton, (lineman) Kent State game; End Jim Massarelli, New Philadelphia, both awards for Dayton game, and Fullback Bob Brooks, Winchester, Ky. (Bobcat) and End Paul Gallagher, Zanesville (lineman) for the Miami game.

Emphasis has been on sophomores in this year's team and this is evidenced by the fact that the four leading ground-gainers are first-year varsity men. Brooks leads all rushers with 321 yards for a three-yard average; John Dickason, halfback from Wellington is second with 231 yards, while combination fullback-halfback John Balough of Chillicothe has gained 156 yards and Bob Harrison has gone 150.

The Bobcats are last in the conference in team offense and third in team defense while resting in a tie for fourth place with Marshall, both with identical 1-2 records. OU's overall record is 3-2.

Two other sports are operating this fall on the campus. These are cross-country and soccer. Though they do not get near the attention as football they have their followers and a full schedule of activities themselves.

So far, the cross-country boys, coached by graduate assistant, Burch Oglesby, have won two and lost four meets. The wins have come over Marshall and Muskingum. Losses were to Bowling Green, Central State, Pittsburgh and Ohio Wesleyan.

Soccer forces, under the coaching of John McComb in their second season under full-time varsity status, have won one of four games. The lone victory came at the expense of Ohio Wesleyan while losses were to Denison, Ohio State and Kenvon.

Another Famous Nixon

WHEN THE Nixon family gathered in Washington for the 1953 inauguration of its best known member, the vice president's father made the statement that "By all odds the brightest man the Nixon family has produced is Earnest."

The incident was brought to light by the vice president himself at a testimonial celebration on the 75th birthday of his uncle, Dr. Earnest L. Nixon, last month.

Although the observation, unintentionally invoked at the expense of Richard Nixon, was amusingly unfair to the man who has risen to the number two political position in the country, it is an example of the respect which his uncle has earned in his own right.

Born in Vinton County, Ohio, and graduated from Ohio University in 1912, Earnest Nixon went to Pennsylvania State University in 1917 as extension plant pathologist, in the years that followed his research prompted the state secretary of agriculture to remark that "Dr. Nixon's work is worth millions of dollars to the farmers of Pennsylvania."

In World War I days, Pennsylvania's potato farmers were fighting a losing battle with the land and with economic facts. Those who dared continue raising potatoes saw their debts going up and their income declining steadily. The state average production was 80 bushels to the acre and quality was poor.

Sometimes pleasing, sometimes bullying when necessary, Dr. Nixon put across a ten-point program for potato production which ranged from soil improvement to disease and insect control.

In less than a decade he became known as the "Potato Wizard" who raised average yield to 130 bushels per acre on farms across the state. Through the secretary of agriculture, he formed a club recognizing accomplishments of farmers who raised yields to 400 bushels per acre. He spent countless hours telling farmers how they could mix and apply Bordeaux mixture for disease control. He introduced certified seed, encouraged farmers to grow better varieties and showed them how to harvest potatoes to get higher prices.

Dr. Nixon proved to farmers that the things he learned in the laboratory could be applied on the farm. Many attributed the economic improvement of entire rural areas directly to his influence.

Meanwhile, proving that he was a practical as well as an intellectual man, he had purchased a 500 acre farm which had been abandoned for more than ten years and was overgrown with brush. In a few years he had converted it into the most productive farm in the county, specializing in growing potatoes and Christmas trees.

In 1940 Dr. Nixon left Penn State to accept a position with the Pennsylvania Chain Store Council. He retired from full-time duty with the Council in 1953, but has maintained his connection as agricultural consultant.

When the Chain Store Council sponsored the special celebration of Dr. Nixon's 75th birthday, the message from his celebrated nephew was read before a distinguished group of well wishers who gathered at the farm. Also presented was a message from Ohio University's President John C. Baker.

The program was a grateful tribute to a man who has benefited hundreds of Mid-Western farmers during a long and fruitful career.

Campus Flashbacks

30 YEARS AGO—The streets of Athens resembled a bedroom on the night of September 30, as several hundred freshmen men swarmed over the city and campus in their annual pajama parade. Theatres, business houses and college dormitories were swarmed upon and traffic was tied up by the activities of the first-year men clad in all colors and varieties of night dress.

25 YEARS AGO—In an effort to make OU students more music conscious and to brighten the gloomy side of arising for 8 o'clock classes, four horn tooting students played various selections each class day morning from 7:45 to 8:00 from the steps of the Edwin Watts Chubb Library. Members of the brass quintet were awarded scholarships covering tuition for their work.

20 YEARS AGO—The names of 147 students who achieved a scholastic rating of 2.5 or better for the last semester were inscribed on an honor list and announced by Registrar Dille. Times have changed for one must now attain a 3.0 to get such recognition.

15 YEARS AGO—All assembled in their nicest gowns and on their best behavior, were the residents of Lindley, Howard, and Boyd Halls with their escorts in the Women's Gym for the first all-dorm formal dance. There was just one complication—the orchestra failed to arrive. The reason being flood blocked roads. The dance went on, however with "canned music."

10 YEARS AGO—Married veteran students who were disappointed with their wives cooking could do something besides complain. For the first time the School of Home Economics offered a two-hour elective course, Introduction to Foods and Nutrition, which was open to men as well as women not majoring in home economics.

5 YEARS AGO—The heat wave which penetrated Athens forced the football practices in the early morning hours. The team was on the field by 6 a.m. Later in the season Coach Widdoes changed the time to 9 a.m. and everyone changed their rising time accordingly except Trainer Fred Schleicher, '47, who still showed up at 6.

Ex-Mayor is Honor Student

Not many college students refer to their time spent in college as an "educational vacation." However Ohio University claims one such person, who is a sophomore this fall.

One may think it would be difficult to leave a position of Mayor in a small town where you are well known and liked, to begin a college education at 34. However, for William (Bill) Hite the decision was easy as it's something he always wanted to do. Bill plans to teach English or History in high school or on a higher level. By attending summer school, he hopes to receive his BSEd degree in three years.

Keeping a high scholastic average (he's been on the Dean's List) and working as counter boss in one of the cafeterias keep the former mayor rather busy. He refers to "just being a college student" as his extra-curricular activity. Bill admits to taking the normal amount of coffee breaks like any other student, but he also spends quite a bit of time studying.

The 15 intervening years between high school and entering O. U. were productive years for Bill. He earned his apprenticeship at the "Willard Times" and later became shop foreman. During this time, Bill held various political offices from mayor to precinct committeeman. Bill's financial assistance to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Arthur Hite, was valuable since his father was an invalid for many years.

The decision to come to college after his father's death in 1956, when Bill's mother said he had done his part at home and should go do something for himself. William Dean, '49, and Jack Gill, '58, friends of Bill, were influential in Bill's choosing O.U. Bill is also the nephew of Helen Duncan McKee, '15.

Bill explains his vocational choice as something from which he will derive satisfaction. He has always tried to do things to eventually benefit someone else besides himself, and teaching will help him achieve this desire.

"There is a stimulating atmosphere at O.U. which makes you want to work," says Bill. The energy of the students and faculty is a distinguishing factor for our university, according to Bill.

CHARLES WILLIAM LYNCH, '28, who held various political and judicial offices in Monroe County, died recently.

ANNA SIMMERMAN, '17, retired teacher and a noted genealogist, died October 7 at her home in Gallipolis. She had been in ill health for the past five years. In addition to teaching English at Gallia Academy High School for many years, she was an authority on the Gallia County history. She acquired this interest from her father who was a veteran of the Civil War. She is survived by a nephew.
